Mike Arroyo, President of the Philippines

Mikey Arroyo, Vice President of the Philippines

Chavit Sison, Bishop of Manila

Mike Arroyo, Mikey Arroyo, and Chavit Sison during a meeting.

Manila, May 14—Three witnesses in a court case filed by the Philippine Daily Inquirer have named President Mike Arroyo, Vice President Mikey Arroyo, and Bishop Chavit Sison as the main players in a alleged "jueteng" (illegal gambling) operation in Manila.

The witnesses, who are former employees of the Arroyo family, testified that they were part of a "jueteng" operation that was run by Mike Arroyo and Mikey Arroyo. They also testified that Bishop Sison was involved in the operation and that he was the one who provided the "jueteng" with the necessary funds.

The witnesses also testified that they were paid by the Arroyo family for their services. They said that they were paid in cash and that the payments were made on a regular basis.

The witnesses' testimony is part of a larger case filed by the Philippine Daily Inquirer against the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison. The case alleges that the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison were involved in a "jueteng" operation that was run in Manila.

The Philippine Daily Inquirer has filed a motion for summary judgment, asking the court to grant summary judgment in its favor. The motion is based on the witnesses' testimony and the fact that the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison have not provided any evidence to disprove the allegations.

The court has scheduled a hearing on the motion for May 20, 2003. The Philippine Daily Inquirer is hopeful that it will win the case and that the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison will be held accountable for their actions.

Meeting in 2001

The witnesses testified that they met with Mike Arroyo and Mikey Arroyo in 2001. They said that they were in a meeting with the two brothers and that they were discussing the "jueteng" operation. They also testified that they were paid by the Arroyo family for their services.

The witnesses also testified that they met with Bishop Sison in 2001. They said that they were in a meeting with the bishop and that they were discussing the "jueteng" operation. They also testified that they were paid by Bishop Sison for their services.

The witnesses' testimony is part of a larger case filed by the Philippine Daily Inquirer against the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison. The case alleges that the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison were involved in a "jueteng" operation that was run in Manila.

Large

The witnesses testified that the "jueteng" operation was very large. They said that it was run in a large building and that it had many employees. They also testified that the operation was very profitable and that it generated a large amount of money for the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison.

The witnesses' testimony is part of a larger case filed by the Philippine Daily Inquirer against the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison. The case alleges that the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison were involved in a "jueteng" operation that was run in Manila.

Extensive knowledge

The witnesses testified that they had extensive knowledge of the "jueteng" operation. They said that they knew where the operation was run and that they knew who was involved in it. They also testified that they knew how the operation was run and that they knew how the money was made.

The witnesses' testimony is part of a larger case filed by the Philippine Daily Inquirer against the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison. The case alleges that the Arroyo family and Bishop Sison were involved in a "jueteng" operation that was run in Manila.

Uzbek gov't admits to 169 deaths, but pressure growing

ANDIJAN, Uzbekistan—Uzbekistan's hardline government dramatically increased its estimated death toll Tuesday from a bloody crackdown in the eastern city of Andijan, as international pressure grew on President Islam Karimov.

Prosecutor general Rashid Kadyrov conceded that the toll was 169—far higher than a previous official estimate of about 30 and still a long way below most independent accounts, including one from opposition activists of 745.

As the United States and the European Union joined Britain in urging Karimov to show restraint, a small group of opposition protesters held a rare demonstration outside the US Embassy in the capital Tashkent.

Andijan itself was mostly calm, but still tense following sporadic gunfire during the night and a continuing heavy military presence.

The Free Farmers, one of the few opposition groups in the autocratic Central Asian ex-Soviet republic, announced that a detailed survey in Andijan revealed a significantly higher death toll than previously feared.

"We started house-to-house checks two days ago and this figure of 745 was for yesterday (Monday). Today we're checking again and it might be more," the party's leader Nigara Hidoyatova said.

Witnesses say that most of the bloodshed in Andijan on Friday happened when troops—sent to subdue a group of gunmen who had stormed the local prison and taken over several public buildings—sprayed gunfire into crowds of demonstrators.

Uzbek officials say the scale of the violence was much lower and that most of those killed were the gunmen, whom they describe as Islamic revolutionaries.

Karimov, a former Soviet leader of Uzbekistan and iron-fisted ruler there since independence in 1991, said a "massive campaign" was under way in the Western media to discredit his government.

Karimov also repeated denials that his forces had shot at unarmed demonstrators—something witnessed by an AFP reporter and many witnesses. "No government in the world would shoot on peaceful demonstrators," he said.

US and Russia fears of instability in mostly Muslim Central Asia mean that criticism of Karimov has generally been muted. Karimov is also considered a valuable ally in Washington because he allowed the use of a major air base for operations across the border in Afghanistan. AFP

US military eyes space; opponents urge caution

WARRENTON, Va.—US efforts to deploy weapons in space face major technical, budgetary and physical barriers, opponents warned this week, but military planners still have high hopes for the "high ground" of future wars.

Everett Dolman, a professor at the Air Force's School of Advanced Air and Space Studies, said he expected the White House to issue a new space policy next month that would underscore the military's determination to protect its existing space assets and maintain dominance of outer space.

Space was essential to how the US military fights wars, Dolman said, noting that satellites already helped relay communications among troops, provided intelligence and targeting data, and guided bombs to their destinations.

"We've crossed the threshold and we simply cannot step back," Dolman, a proponent of space weapons, said at a two-day Nuclear Policy Research Institute conference.

Dolman said the critical question was not whether the United States should weaponize space, but whether it could afford to allow other states to get a jumpstart in this area.

He said work on several technologies—including work on microsatellites that could be launched to target enemy satellites and satellite-jamming systems—was far enough along that it could be declared operational within 18 months.

Antinuclear activist Helen Caldicott organized the conference about 50 miles outside Washington to discuss what she described as dangerous moves that could spark a new arms race in space, as well as jeopardizing weather forecasting, communications satellites and other peaceful uses of space. Reuters

Yukos founder guilty of fraud

MOSCOW—Yukos oil baron Mikhail Khodorkovsky was convicted of fraud Tuesday, but was left waiting for a verdict on 10 other counts as the court dragged out the controversial trial of Russia's onetime richest man.

KHODORKOVSKY

The verdict, which concerned the acquisition of a 44-percent stake in an agricultural institute by Khodorkovsky and business partner Platon Lebedev, appeared to confirm the widely expected outcome—that the two Yukos founders will be found guilty in the epic fraud and tax evasion trial. Following the decision, Yelena Lipster, a lawyer for Lebedev, told journalists the two men had no chance of being found not guilty of the other charges, saying: "We can only speculate on what sentence will be handed down."

But verdicts on the remaining counts had yet to be announced, meaning that the denouement of the 11-month trial, which has badly damaged Russia's image abroad and become a major political issue at home, was set to drag on.

"What is important from our point of view is the signal sent to the business and investor community," said a spokesperson for EU external relations commissioner Benita Ferrero-Waldner.

"What's important to us is that there is a transparent and non-discriminatory framework for business to invest in Russia," she added.

And the Council of Europe's pointwoman on the Khodorkovsky case, Sabine Leutenssner-Schnarrenberger, said "the judgment in this ongoing trial... is a sign of the uncertainty of justice for foreign countries and for investors."

The prosecution has asked for a maximum sentence of 10 years for Khodorkovsky, 41, and Lebedev, 46, who are charged under seven articles of the Russian criminal code. Both men deny all charges. AFP

Quarry tax dip blamed

on Lapid exemptions

By Steven Grogan

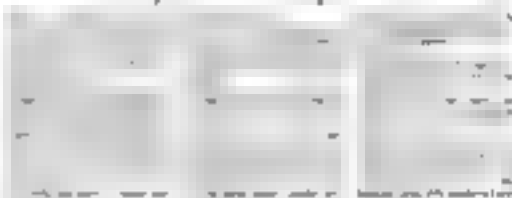

Quarry taxes in Israel have dropped sharply in the first three months of this year, according to a report by the Israel Tax Authority. The report, which was released last week, shows that quarry taxes have fallen by 15 percent compared to the same period last year. The report also shows that the number of quarry exemptions has increased by 20 percent. The report is the first of its kind since 1997, when the Israel Tax Authority began publishing quarterly reports on quarry taxes. The report is a key indicator of the health of the Israeli economy, as quarry taxes are a major source of revenue for the government. The report also shows that the number of quarry exemptions has increased by 20 percent. The report is the first of its kind since 1997, when the Israel Tax Authority began publishing quarterly reports on quarry taxes.

Oil firms slash gas prices by 75¢/liter

By Robert Lee

Oil companies have slashed prices on gasoline, diesel and kerosene in a move to boost sales and reduce inventory. The move is expected to result in a 75-cent per liter price cut for gasoline, 50-cent for diesel and 25-cent for kerosene.

Oil companies have slashed prices on gasoline, diesel and kerosene in a move to boost sales and reduce inventory.

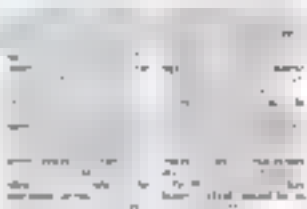

The price of oil has fallen sharply in recent months, leading to a decline in gasoline prices.

Oil prices have fallen sharply in recent months, leading to a decline in gasoline prices. The price of oil has fallen from over $100 per barrel to around $70 per barrel. This has led to a decline in gasoline prices from over $2.00 per liter to around $1.50 per liter. The decline in oil prices is due to a combination of factors, including a decline in demand for oil and a decline in production costs.
